Kentucky Equine Adoption Center to Represent Kentucky on Good Morning America's "America the Beautiful: 50 States in 50 Weeks"

LEXINGTON, KY — The Kentucky Equine Adoption Center (KYEAC) is proud to announce that it has been selected by Good Morning America (GMA) to represent the Commonwealth of Kentucky in its nationally televised series "America the Beautiful: 50 States in 50 Weeks." This special segment, which spotlights organizations making a positive difference in their communities, will air Thursday, October 9th on ABC.

KYEAC, located just outside of Lexington, is the nation's largest all-breed equine adoption facility. Since its founding in 2008, KYEAC has provided a safe haven for neglected, abused, or surrendered horses, giving them rehabilitation, retraining, and the opportunity for adoption into loving homes. As a Thoroughbred Aftercare Alliance (TAA)-accredited organization, KYEAC also plays a vital role in transitioning Thoroughbreds from racing careers into new lives.

"We are deeply honored to represent Kentucky on a national stage," said Carrie Wood, KYEAC's Executive Director. "Kentucky is the Horse Capital of the World, and we're proud to showcase the compassion, dedication, and second chances that define our work with these incredible animals."

The America the Beautiful series celebrates resilience, service, and the spirit of giving back across the nation. By highlighting organizations like KYEAC, GMA aims to inspire viewers with stories of hope and impact in every state.

The segment will feature KYEAC's staff, volunteers, and horses, shining a spotlight on the transformative work happening at the center. For viewers who wish to get involved, KYEAC encourages adoption, volunteering, and donations to support its mission of giving every horse the opportunity to thrive.

About the Kentucky Equine Adoption Center (KYEAC):

The Kentucky Equine Adoption Center is a 72-acre facility in Nicholasville, KY, dedicated to rehabilitating, retraining, and rehoming all breeds of horses. Since 2008, KYEAC has been a safe place for equines in need, with hundreds of horses finding second careers and loving homes through its programs.

Accredited by the Thoroughbred Aftercare Alliance, KYEAC sets the highest standard in equine welfare and adoption.
