Good Morning America to Broadcast LIVE from the Kentucky Equine Adoption Center on October 9

Nicholasville, KY – The Kentucky Equine Adoption Center (KYEAC) is honored to announce that it has been selected as the hero organization representing the Commonwealth of Kentucky on ABC's Good Morning America as part of the show's nationwide series, America the Beautiful: 50 States in 50 Weeks.

On Thursday, October 9, 2025, Good Morning America will broadcast LIVE from the Kentucky Equine Adoption Center in Nicholasville, spotlighting KYEAC's mission to rescue, rehabilitate, and rehome Kentucky's horses.

"We are deeply humbled that Good Morning America has chosen to highlight KYEAC as Kentucky's representative in this inspiring series," said Carrie Wood, Executive Director of the Kentucky Equine Adoption Center. "This recognition underscores the vital role horses play in our state's heritage and the importance of giving every horse a second chance."

KYEAC, the largest all-breed equine adoption center in Kentucky, has helped thousands of horses find safe and loving homes since its founding. With Kentucky at the heart of the global horse industry, KYEAC provides a humane safety net for horses in need while connecting them with new homes and careers.

The Good Morning America broadcast will showcase the Center's dedicated team, its partnerships across the state, and the powerful bond between humans and horses. The segment will also feature stories of rescued horses whose lives have been transformed through KYEAC's programs.

The Kentucky Equine Adoption Center invites viewers across the state and nation to tune in on Thursday, October 9, from 7:00–9:00 a.m. EST to witness this celebration of Kentucky's horses and the community that cares for them. More details are available at www.kyeac.org/gma.

About the Kentucky Equine Adoption Center
